There is nothing more valuable than hearing directly from the people I have had the opportunity to work with throughout my career. Their perspective provides a true reflection of not only my professional skills, but also how I collaborate, communicate, and contribute to the creative process within a team.

I greatly value their insights, as they give a clear picture of the way I approach projects, adapt to different workflows, and help achieve the best possible results. The feedback below comes from colleagues, collaborators, and supervisors who have worked closely with me on various projects, and I hope it gives a comprehensive view of my experience and work ethic.

For your convenience, I am also including their contact information, in case you would like to reach out directly to hear more about their experiences working with me.

• LORDS OF THE FALLEN | CI GAMES
Guido Mastrngelo | Lead Sound Designer

Nacho is a driven and talented sound designer, always keen to collaborate and to improve. Even during tight deadlines he managed to deliver in time. It was a pleasure to work alongside him.

• AUTOMATE-IT | SOUTH BLUE MOON
Paulo Henrique de Lima | Lead programmer

Our experience working with Nacho was extremely positive. His sound design work was made to match our game and it was great, very high quality. Every time we had to change elements of the game, he adapted the audio accordingly and guided us on any additional technical requirements needed to support the changes, always paying close attention to even the smallest details.

• THE ZIBBO SHOW | TESSERA GAMES
Markel Cuena | Senior Game Designer

Nacho brought an exceptional level of quality to The Zibbo Show, crafting a distinctive sound identity that perfectly captures the game's atmosphere and personality. Beyond creating and meticulously polishing every sound, he went a step further by proposing sounds and variations that helped solve design problems and improve the game's readability, ensuring the audio not only felt great but also communicated clearly with the player.

Working with him has been an absolute pleasure. He is exceptionally attentive to detail, proactive and resourceful, and never settles for anything less than the best possible result. He is, without a doubt, the kind of professional you want on your team when developing a game.

• THEREFORE | TRIM TANGLE
Trim Tangle: Therefore Team

In our video game Therefore, sound goes far beyond being an artistic complement and becomes an essential part of the gameplay mechanics. Not only through the introduction of sound-based puzzles in the adventure, but also as a foundational element of its world. The environment and its interactive objects and characters possess essences that the player can hear, extract as sounds, and combine to create new objects.

With this premise, we were certain that we needed a sound designer who would not simply focus on producing a set of sounds that matched the game's visual effects and actions. For Therefore, the role had to go further. We needed someone who would engage deeply with its background and philosophy, who would make the effort to understand its characters and their prevailing emotions, and who would know how to turn concepts and ideas from everyday objects into sounds that represented those feelings and ideas. This meant proposing sonic solutions to questions such as: what do hatred, anger, love, or fear sound like? How should wood, metal, glass, or stone be heard as primordial elements for the creation of more complex objects? What sounds can express abstract concepts such as time, darkness, honor, or justice?

This was the great challenge we presented to Nacho, without even being certain it could be successfully achieved. The surprise came when we began to hear his work, and even more so as he continued to refine it throughout production. Being able to hear abstract sounds that truly evoke emotions, ideas, concepts, or materials was astonishing. Through sound, he achieved what a dictionary does through words: explaining and conveying meaning using sound.

And if Nacho successfully solved these major challenges, the same can be said of the rest of the game's sound effects. The ambience, footsteps, fauna, and many other environmental elements feature outstanding sound production.

Based on this experience, we can only strongly recommend Nacho as a sound designer for any video game or sound project.
